Investment Outlook & Strategy

Volatility is likely to return if Euro dips back into a recession or China sees a collapse in its shadow banking/property market. With these headwinds, there is more certainty that more stimulus measures will continue from ECB, PBOC and BOJ. The idea of the US Fed raising rates earlier than expected (1H 2015) is unlikely in our view even as other major economies (Eurozone, China, and Japan) and Emerging Markets are seeing weak growth/risk of deflation. Fundamentally weak economic recoveries will continue to drive markets globally with liquidity moving forward. We are on the last leg of the year. From what we have gone through so far in this 4Q, the market appears undecided. The rebound of the KLCI after the bottom in mid-October 2014 (lowest for the year at 1,788.31 on October 17, 2014) has been relatively strong but has remained subdued ever since. Market is still below last year's close, yet there is no strong accumulation and the re-balancing exercise for next year seems mild. The market does react to strong movements in the external/regional bourses but only to pullback again when others are flat. Although another 40-50pts may not be a lot for the market to catch to last year's close, a strong year-to-date performance currently appears difficult.

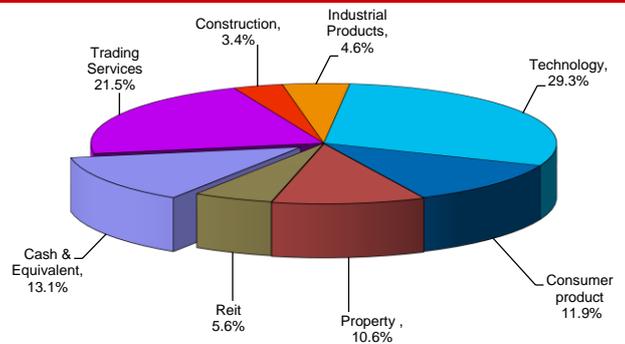

Window of clarity for the market for now only extends up to Q1 2015 as the GST implementation in April will most likely put a cap on corporate earnings potentials / increase uncertainties and in turn cause a more cautious and softer market sentiment / scenario. As such, current Investment Strategy is to front-load and lock-in profits early before end March 2015 pending current chains of events and how the global economic situation and events may unfold moving forward into 2015. On a medium to long term basis, we still believe that the market's fundamentals still remains sound and intact as the overall global economic and capital market conditions/outlook now continue to improve albeit at a different beat and momentum. In addition, equity will still be a relatively better asset class to invest in compared to fixed income on the back of flush liquidity and eventual rising rate environment. This is so if compared to last 12-18 months ago as the central bankers / policy makers are better prepared with anti-recessionary policies in place.
